Past performance is no guarantee of future results and is not constant over time. Performances are calculated by comparing the net asset value at the end of the period to that at the beginning of the period. The figures shown are calculated in the reference currency of the share class. They are calculated after deduction of all charges, with the exception of any entry/exit charges. Net figures do not take account of taxes applicable to the average retail individual client in their country of residence. When the currency shown differs from the client's currency, there is a currency risk that can result in a decrease in value.

MANAGEMENT TEAM COMMENT

The European markets ended the second consecutive month on an upturn, with a performance of +3.34% for the EuroStoxx 50. Markets focused on the earnings season, which was generally encouraging, with far fewer warnings than in the third quarter. Europe's outperformance relative to the US intensified in February, with the main US indices recording declines, mainly due to technology stocks (Nasdaq -2.8%). Increasing competition from low-cost Chinese AI models, such as Deep Seek, is raising concerns about the massive investments made by US companies and their potential profitability. At the same time, Donald Trump was once again at the centre of the news. In particular, he fuelled fears in the markets by announcing the introduction of tariffs for China, Mexico and Canada, before postponing their application. On Europe, he reiterated his intention to impose tariffs on products imported from Europe.

With regard to the central banks, Jerome Powell reiterated his intention to maintain a restrictive monetary policy, as inflation is still not under control. This risk will increase with the introduction of customs duties. The ECB, for its part, will certainly cut its rates on 6 March, but some of its members, such as Isabel Schnabel, believe that this trend should rather be interrupted. Against this backdrop, the fund ended the month up 0.24%. Equities made a negative contribution to performance (-0.3%) due to the sharp drop across the entire US coast (Nasdaq -2.76% and S&P -1.42%). The bond allocation made a positive contribution of 0.8% in a uniform manner. However, we continue to lengthen the duration by buying bonds maturing in 2030 and 2033. Finally, we continued to strengthen our position in gold.
